

STEPHANO'S PASSENGERS LOST ALL BAGGAGE WHEN U-BOAT DESTROYED THEIR SHIP

When the German submarine ordered the crew and passengers off the steamship Stephano before sinking the vessel the men and women had no time to save their baggage, and all was lost with the Stephano. One of the women passengers, Mrs. Martin Koshner of St. John's N. F., was bringing her household goods to New York city with the intention of establishing a home in that city.

"I lost everything," said Mrs. Koshner, "all my household goods." Mrs. Koshner said that she had relatives in Brooklyn and would go to live with them. Mrs. Koshner is seen in No. 3 in the accompanying picture.

made on her arrival in New York, with her two children, Katherine and Etie Marie. The man is a fellow passenger, George Kennedy. No. 1 is the crew of the Stephano, with some of the sailors of the rescuing destroyer Ericsson. No. 2 is the Kansan, the ship which was held up by the U-53, but permitted to proceed to Boston.

BILL DONOVAN IS 40 TOMORROW

Although New York's dream of an American League pennant was not realized this year, there is no disposition to blame "Wild Bill" Donovan, the pilot of the Yankees. On the contrary, Pilot Bill is a great favorite with the metropolitan fans, who firmly believe that he would have annexed the gonfalon except for the injuries which he has suffered out of the past season for long periods. The baseball machine put together by the former pitching star of the Tigers at least succeeded in putting New York on the American League map, and in reimbursing Ruppert and Huston for the large wads of money they have put into the club.

"Wild Bill" will receive the congratulations of his friends to-morrow on the occasion of his fortieth birthday. He was born on October 13, 1876, in Lawrence, Mass., but spent most of his youth in Philadelphia, and gained his first baseball experience on the diamonds of Fairmount Park. He began his professional career as a pitcher in Sunbury Pa., in 1895. Later he played with Pawtucket and Watertown and was given a trial by Washington. In 1900 Ned Hanlon got him for the Brooklyn Superbas, and it was in his early appearances in the City of Churches that Donovan won his sobriquet of "Wild Bill." Hanlon sent him back to Hartford three times before he finally triumphed over his wildness and gained the control which made him one of the greatest pitchers of his time. In 1903 he leaped to Detroit, where for several seasons he was the mainspring of the Tiger twirling machine.

Donovan is the eighth man to manage the New York American League club. When the Johnson circuit decided to invade the metropolis in 1903, Clarke Griffith, who had scored a success as the head of the Chicago club the two previous seasons, was given the managerial berth. The "Old Fox" retained the helm five full seasons, the Yankees finishing in second place twice while they finished fourth, fifth and sixth the other years.

Griffith resigned in June, 1908, later becoming manager of the Washington club. Norman Elberfeld, "the Tabasco Kid," finished out the 1908 season as manager, and the Yankees finished in the cellar. Elberfeld has piloted the Chattanooga club this year. George Stallings, now famed as leader of the Boston Braves, was in charge of the Yankees in 1909, and finished fifth in 1910. Stallings and Captain Hal Chase were constantly at dagger points and toward the close of the season Stallings resigned, and was succeeded by Prince Hal. The Yankees finished second that year. Chase remained at the helm in 1911, but the team finished sixth, and Hal was dropped. In 1912 Harry Wolverton, since manager of the San Francisco Seals, piloted the humble Yankees to an eighth place finish. Frank Chance, the "Peerless Leader" of the old Cub machine, and this year the manager of the Los Angeles club, took up the Yankee burden in 1913, but, lacking the material to work with, he fared no better than his predecessors. He resigned in disgust in 1914 and Roger Peckinpaugh finished the season as manager. Donovan has been on the job two years, and his third year, he thinks, will earn a pennant onto the Yankee flag.

Now that the Japanese are beginning to take a prominent part in athletic activities, a lot of American "amateurs" are talking about the "yellow peril." They are afraid the "cheap labor of the Orient" will bring about a reduction of their wages, maybe.

DR. SIDIS ON LAUGHTER

Dr. Boris Sidis, one of the most distinguished of American psychopathologists and the father of the intellectual prodigy who astonished Harvard a few years ago, was born in Russia on October 12, 1867, and hence begins his fiftieth year to-day. Dr. Sidis is best known to the lay reader through his advocacy of an educational system which, he has asserted, was responsible for the remarkable intellectual development of his own son. Young Sidis was discussing abstruse mathematical problems with Harvard professors at an age when most lads are unable to figure out Ty Cobb's batting average with any degree of accuracy. Dr. Sidis has written a number of books which are not without interest to the lay reader, one of these being "The Psychology of Laughter." In that volume he attempts to answer the question, "Why do we laugh?" He enters into the matter fully, explaining both the physiological and psychological aspects of smiles, grins and haw-haws.

Dr. Sidis points out that one of the frequent causes of laughter is the superiority we feel toward those who arouse our mirth. The ignorant, the clumsy, the stupid, the inferior, often excite our risibilities, and cause us to laugh when we should feel only pity and sympathy. The afflictions of others are often mirth-provoking to us, and laughter thus degenerates into a shameless display of innate meanness of the human animal.

There is a better side to laughter, for Dr. Sidis points out that "all unrefined spontaneous activities of normal functions give rise to the emotion of joy with its expression of smiles and laughter." Dr. Sidis further declares—that many of us know to our mental discomfort—that "what is not customary, what is not usual, is laughed at."

The eminent psychologist concludes that the laughter of pure merriment or enjoyment, or the laughter which follows triumph over difficulties, is healthful and adds to human happiness, while the laughter of malice, excited by the inferiority or difficulties of others, would better be left unlaughed. In short, it makes all the difference in the world whether we laugh with or at a person.

ARTILLERY FIRE OF ITALIANS HAS DEADLY RESULTS

Paris, Oct. 12.—The following description of the recent Italian success on the Carso, has been telegraphed to the Petit Parisien by its war correspondent on the Italian front:

"Our artillery on the morning of October 8 began to concentrate its fire on the zone between Vertolba and the sea, favored intermittently by the sun. All calibers engaged in a grand concert and their fire swept the Austrian position yard by yard growing gradually more intense.

"On the next day, the ninth, the bombardment continued unabated. Patrols who were sent out to reconnoiter reported splendid results, particularly where the Austrians were most strongly established in the region of Oppeschezzelle. Here the Austrian line had its strongest height. The line descends from Hill 23 to the north as far as a mile east of the road from Oppeschezzelle to Jamiano. The enemy had made several series of trenches facing every direction which made the defense of the position easy. Two of the most important positions were the triangular redoubt and another position called Fortino, which were furnished with machine guns and protected by formidable artillery. It was against this part of the front that the Italian artillery was directed yesterday with magnificent results.

"I followed the battle yesterday morning from a central point near Nova Vass and Villanova. It was a fantastic sight. The Austrian trenches were converted into heaps of rubble by the explosion of the big shells, which shot columns of smoke and dust 300 feet into the air. At 10:30 reports came that though the trenches and barbed wire entanglements had been wiped out, the enemy had hidden in caves awaiting the infantry attack.

"The artillery opened afresh on the second and third Austrian lines, the bombardment reaching its climax at 1:30.

"The infantry attacked at 2:30 with splendid dash, and the triangular redoubt and Fortuna fell after a desperate struggle. The enemy went down everywhere before the Italians, notwithstanding a stubborn resistance. After a few hours' fighting at Nova Vass a thousand prisoners were taken among whom all Austrian nationalities were represented. We obtained proof that far from withdrawing troops the Austrians had sent several fresh battalions to reinforce the defenders of the Carso."

ECZEMA ITCHED AND BURNED CONSTANTLY

Used Resinol—Soon Entirely Cured

Mar. 10—"I had itching eczema for almost four years. My shoulders, neck, arms and just below the knees were affected. It was simply a constant itching, burning, smarting sensation. The part below my knees was frightful. It would itch so, and with the least scratching become so sore, I could hardly stand to bend them. I could not possibly sit down because I would naturally have to bend my knees, and that I could not do. I could hardly do my housework. I had tried different soaps, ointments, salves, liniments, etc., all too numerous to mention—all to no avail. At last I learned of Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap and used them according to directions. That night was the first time in many that I slept in peace and in a short time I was entirely cured." (Signed) Mrs. G. C. Sibley, Box 30, Rockville, N. Y.

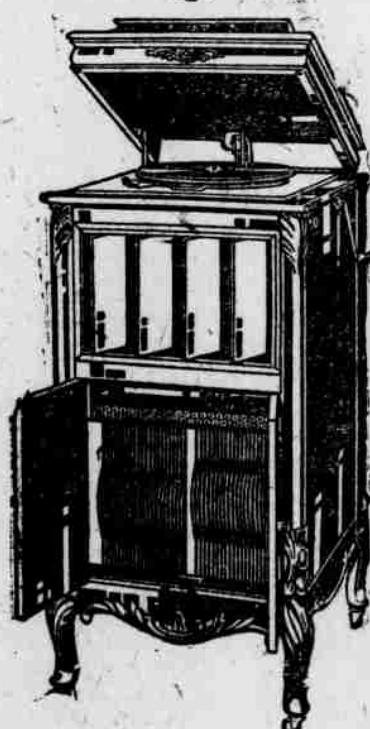

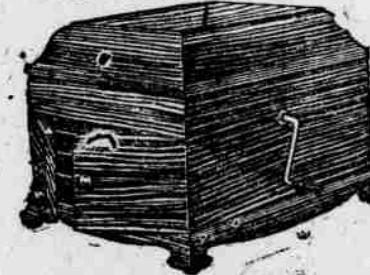

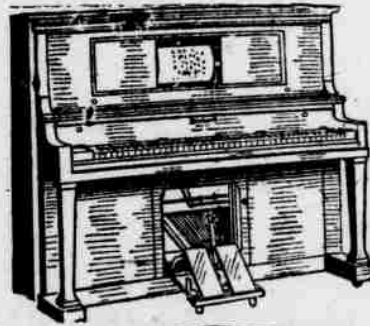

All druggists sell Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap. For samples, free write to Dept. 1-2, Resinol, Baltimore.
